

More Jerseys

Come to Didsbury.

The Didsbury district has long been known as the leading dairying area of Alberta. When the minister of Agriculture came to Alberta to look for dairy cows he visited Didsbury first. The town and district are widely known for the fine herds of dairy cows to be found here and in the future there are sure to many buyers attracted here from all parts of the country.

A great deal of additional publicity for Didsbury has come through the establishment of an outstanding Jersey herd. The cows imported by Norman Clark are widely recognized as being outstanding and already many visitors from all parts of Alberta and other provinces have been to see them. Mr. Clark is now well known in all parts of the west for his interest and connection with the dairy business and it is understood that his establishing of a large Jersey herd is recognized as the beginning of much interest in Alberta in that breed of cows.

Twenty five head of pure bred heifers arrived in Didsbury from Spokane on Friday and moved to Mr. Clark's farm. Here they will be pasture bred to Sultan's Oxford the young Grand Champion bull. This bull is one of the most valuable animals in Canada and is out of a long line of high producing and fine type Jerseys.

His dam is widely known in the United States and Canada and has been many times a winner in the show ring. On his top line his breeding is equally outstanding.

These heifers are for distribution in all parts of Alberta after they have been proved in calf to Sultan's Oxford.

WEDDING BELLS

On the morning of June 2nd, in the M.B.C. Church, Mr. Virgil K. Snyder and Miss Anna M. Neufeld, both of Didsbury, were united in the sacred bonds of matrimony in the presence of a large circle of relatives and friends.

The bride, neatly dressed in white silk, covered with a flowing veil and carrying a beautiful bouquet of white carnations, was led to the altar and given away by her brother, Abe Neufeld. Mr. Harley A. Traub acted as groomsmen, while Miss Elizabeth Neufeld, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid.

After prayer, led by Rev. C. J. Hallman, Rev. A. Traub solemnized the marriage.

Following the ceremony, a large company of the nearest friends were entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Traub, where the wedding lunch was served.

The happy young couple left in the afternoon, by motor car for a short honeymoon in Portland, Oregon. Upon their return, they will be at home at Acadia Valley, Alberta, where Mr. Snyder has been engaged in pastoral work.

Their many friends wish them well as they embark on the voyage of life together.

Mr. Bill McFarquhar has severed his connection with Builders Hardware and is commencing business on his own account in the near future.

These heifers have been selected in Washington and are remarkably uniform and type. The dams of some of them have been sold for prices ranging from two to twelve hundred dollars. They are by outstanding sires on the Waikiki Farms, the second largest Jersey breeding establishment in the United States.

Set For July 28.

Prorogation and dissolution of parliament occurred Friday night, with the election date set for July 28, with nominations in most places a week before that.

In the urban centers throughout Canada the enumeration of voters begins this week. This has necessitated some day and night work by the election bureau since dissolution on Friday night, and telegraph companies have fared well in voluminous last minute instructions which could not be sent out till the amended Elections Act was sanctioned.

Hon. R. B. Bennett will open the Conservative campaign at Winnipeg a week from tonight, and his itinerary, the western country first, is now being worked out in detail by General McRae. The time and place of the first speech of the prime minister is not yet announced, but it is expected to be in Ontario.

Can "Good" Be Accomplished By "Force"?

Through the ages as man has struggled upward from his caveman state to his present condition of semi-civilization,—for it requires only a hurried glance through the columns of any daily paper any day to prove that man is not yet fully civilized,—he has carried with him the brute instinct to try and accomplish things by force rather than by persuasion; instead of trying to win support to his views and convictions, he has tried to force it. The more civilized, the better educated man becomes, the more does he rely upon appeals to reason instead of having resort to force. None the less the state of the nations today, and our tendency to resort to the power of legislation and law to enforce opinions upon others, reveals how largely we still depend on force to govern our everyday affairs.

The question, therefore, naturally arises: Has any definite lasting good ever come to humanity through the coercive action of force? Could one find a single, unquestionable instance in the whole range of human history where compulsion has been the direct and sole agency in changing the mental attitude, the belief, the convictions or the conscience-sense of any one normal intelligence? Without reserve one may venture to say "No" to both questions.

There is profound truth in Butler's couplet: "He that complies against his will is of his own opinion still." One may be persuaded to change one's mind, to take a different viewpoint, to espouse another belief, to modify or discard a long-held conviction, to give conscience a new direction, and through it all to act differently,—the action being either good or bad according to the prevailing general opinion; but it is sincerely to be doubted that force, no matter what its form or its avowed purpose, ever has or ever will bring about the only thing—a change of mind and heart—that is necessary to produce a new line of action. Without the voluntary conversion of the individual mind and heart, that is, of thought and conscience, there can be no reasonable expectancy of bringing about, definitely, permanently and dominantly, a new condition—social, economic, political, ethical, or moral. All our social reformers, our political leaders, our legislators, would do well to ponder this thought and pay closer heed to the lessons of experience and history.

If we would study impartially the action of unleashed force directed with the ostensible purpose of producing eventual good, we may turn our eyes toward Russia today. True, the conflicting reports coming out of the country advise us to draw conclusions with a certain reserve; yet there is enough of what appears to be authentic to warrant the present view that the Soviet Government of Russia is using compulsion in the fullest meaning of the term, to impose its minority, compactly organized will upon the unorganized great majority of that vast country.

The Communists may tell us, as well as some three-fourths of the people of Russia, that persuasion, through "propaganda," is their chief agency for the building of a "New Russia"; but it is propaganda backed by armed force, by secret police, by studied cruelty, and by unrelenting terrorism. Putting the most charitable construction upon the Soviet's methods for the complete communization of Russia, they are trying to do what they consider to be good practically altogether by the exercise of force. A marvelously organized minority seeks to compel a helplessly disorganized majority to accept without question its views as to what is best for the political, social, economic and moral well-being of the whole.

And all history tells us that this cannot be done. Reform by force lasts just so long as the force which brought it about is strong enough to maintain it. Force not only invites opposition, but generates it. And soon or late, the opposing force becomes the more powerful, and we have another clash of forces, more disturbance and confusion, reaction, or, perhaps, some more compulsory "reformation." But we cannot say confidently that out of it all has come a single, definite step of progress. Force is the antithesis of co-operation, and without the voluntary co-operation of all the interests involved there can be no genuine progress.

What is true of Russia just now, would be equally true of any other country, or state, or community. No matter how desirable the proposed or initiated reform may be, force, if applied to it, eventually will defeat it. Without the voluntary and earnest co-operation of a pronounced majority of all concerned even unquestioned good is not likely to be achieved. And surely no intelligent person would be content with "forced good."

WAS RUN DOWN AND VERY WEAK

Too Little Blood the Trouble

Mrs. Jas. A. Haughn, Bridgewater, N.S., writes:—"I was badly run down and very weak. So much so I could scarcely do my housework. My nerves were affected; my indigestion poor; I had continued headaches and could not get a restful night's sleep. Different remedies failed to be of benefit and I was growing discouraged. One day, however, I saw an advertisement of a case similar to mine which had been relieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, so I decided to try them. A few weeks' use of the Pills fully restored my health and now my household duties are a pleasure instead of a torture."

Mrs. Houghn's whole trouble was that she had too little blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were of aid to her because they renewed and purified her blood and that good blood promoted good health, for where good blood abounds disease cannot exist.

You can get these Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEW APPOINTMENT

R. G. McNEILLIE

Prominent among the spring promotions of Canadian Pacific Railway officials was the appointment of R. G. McNeillie, as assistant passenger traffic manager of eastern lines, with headquarters at Montreal. Mr. McNeillie, who was general passenger agent, at Winnipeg, for eight years, left at the end of April for the east, his new appointment becoming effective May 1.

Mr. McNeillie entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1901, as a stenographer in the general passenger department, at Winnipeg, becoming chief clerk in 1905. In that year he became acting district passenger agent at Nelson, B.C., and district passenger agent at Calgary, in 1910. He was promoted in 1913 to the position of assistant general passenger agent, western lines, with headquarters at Winnipeg, becoming general passenger agent in 1922.

Before his departure for Montreal, Mr. McNeillie was remembered by the members of the passenger department from the head of the lakes to Field, B.C., and at Minneapolis with a handsome liqueur set, with cut glass decanters and glasses, and a wardrobe suit case, the presentation made by C. E. McPherson, who is now acting in an advisory capacity to the passenger department.

Darling, of Cincinnati, before the Ontario Safety Convention. ## Over Thirty Million Dollars Invested In Industries Using Clay From Canada's Deposits

Canada is fortunate in possessing resources in many types of clay employed in the manufacturing industries. In a list of 35 lines of manufacture in the Dominion, clay of one type or another appears among the supplies for 24 of them. It is used in large amounts in the making of such materials as cement, paper, and textiles. It is even used as a purifier of land and oils. Its greatest use, however, is in the so-called clay-working industries in which over a million and a half tons of various types of clay enter into the composition of the products each year. These industries represent an invested capital of over $30,000,000 and employ almost 5,000 men.

These types of clay differ greatly in physical properties such as color in the natural and burned state, plasticity, strength when dry and burned, shrinkage, vitrification range and refractoriness. The clay used in the clay-working industries are classified according to the purposes for which they are adapted. For example, there are pottery clays, including china clay or kaolin and ball clay used in the compounding of porcelain; stoneware clay for making vitrified ware, and earthenware clay for making the more porous earthenware; refractory clays capable of withstanding very high temperatures used for the manufacture of firebricks; sewer pipe clays which produce a dense impervious body capable of taking a salt glaze for the making of sewer pipes and similar products; and brick and tile clays and shales for the manufacture of structural brick and tile and farm drain tile.

The pottery clay cannot be said to be plentiful so far as distribution is concerned but there are a number of deposits of importance, particularly of china clay in Quebec and British Columbia; of ball clay in Saskatchewan; and of stoneware and earthenware clays in Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Fireclays are graded according to their refractoriness or the temperature which they can withstand in service, ranging from low heat duty. The high heat duty or high grade fireclays are of rather rare occurrence in Canada but the lower grades are of broader distribution. With the exception of Prince Edward Island and Manitoba, all the provinces of Canada are known to possess deposits of fireclay though some of the deposits are too remote from the markets to be of immediate value.

In the manufacture of building brick and structural and drain tile, common surface clays and shales are used and, to a lesser extent, low grade fireclays. Canada has immense resources of such clays and shales suitable for making good quality brick of a wide range of texture and color, distributed through the nine provinces, and there is ample evidence that good use is made of them. Close observers of conditions in Canada and the United States are struck by the greater proportion of brick structures, especially dwellings, in Canada.

In the ceramics laboratories of the department of mines which were established for the testing of clays and as an aid to the clay-working industries, a staff of engineers and assistants is engaged on various investigations bearing upon the problems of manufacture. Subjects of general interest to groups of ceramic manufacturers are investigated in detail, and technical advice and assistance in minor problems are freely given to individual manufacturers. The objects constantly being worked for are the improving and cheapening of the processes of manufacture and the aiding of the industry to produce better and wider ranges of wares.

The value of these services has recently been demonstrated through the successful outcome of an investigation of the drying of brick made from a certain type of clay very common in the prairie provinces. Bricks made from this clay are very difficult to dry without cracking even when the utmost care is exercised. A process was worked out and placed in operation in a plant with the result that the drying time was reduced to less than half, the drying loss practically eliminated and the finished brick greatly improved in quality. At this one plant a saving of many thousand dollars was effected. The process which is applicable to many plants has since been adopted by several.

Will Boost Grain Show

Co-Operation Of British National Farmers' Union Is Promised

Stressing the fact that residents of the Old Country were "out for cheap food" and promising co-operation of the National Farmers' Union in giving publicity to the World Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held in 1932, Warner Baxter, Birmingham, England, past president of the Union, addressed a meeting of the Regina Board of Trade held in the Hotel Saskatchewan under the auspices of the agricultural division of the Board.

Mr. Baxter stated co-operation of the National Farmers' Union of Great Britain in boosting the World Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held in Regina, in 1932, would be forthcoming, and said that, through the 130,000 members of the union, the publicity through the Old Country would reach almost every possible exhibitor.

If assurance was given that exhibits sent over to Canada for the exhibition in Regina would be given a good display, he said that there was no reason why a large number of exhibits should not be shown at the grain exhibition.

First Class Equipment Pays

Enables Farmer To Increase Production At Lower Cost

The three important factors in the cost of producing crops are land, labor and capital, and the human labor factor is the only one which is higher today than it was fifteen years ago, a statement prepared by officials of the Dominion Department of Agriculture shows. Field husbandmen therefore, stress the importance of making the hired man's wages count by supplying him with first class equipment so that wherever possible he may be able to do literally two days work in one. This is where modern farm machinery comes in. Eastern Canada crops take 20 hours labor per acre to harvest; Western Canada crops harvested with horse-drawn outfits take 11 hours labor per acre, and harvested with the use of the new combine-harvester the labor cost is only 2.5 hours per acre.

Western Farmers Living Up To Their Reputation For Optimism and Work

A. E. Warren, vice-president of the Western region of the Canadian National Railways, reports that both farmers and business men of the prairie country are more hopeful than was the case a few months ago. He comes to this conclusion after completing his latest trip through the West. Mr. Warren remarks that, "with his usual courage, the prairie farmer is not permitting market prices and discouraging reports to interfere with his work," and says that, except in isolated cases, the acreage being seeded this year is not being reduced. "Conditions favorable to the crop exist for the moment, and the rural atmosphere may be described as quite cheerful."

As suggesting an improvement in economic conditions in Canada generally, Mr. Warren's observations tend to bear out what his "chief," Sir Henry Thornton, has just remarked in New York. Sir Henry reports that business activity in Canada is steadily increasing and that normal conditions may again prevail by August. It is also of interest, in connection with Canadian conditions, to note the decision of the Federal Reserve Board of the United States to facilitate throughout the republic the acceptance of the Canadian dollar at par.

Western farmers are doing their full part in Canada's nation-wide effort to right herself after one or two unfortunate occurrences that served to injure, though far from imperil, her economic fabric, these lying in partial crop failure and the stock market crash of last year. Western farmers are doing this in their own interest and in the national interest. And they are doing it in the main by "sawing wood" and maintaining their traditional determination and cheerfulness. The man who keeps pegging away at his job, who keeps a stiff upper lip, and who carries a smile usually emerges successful, eventually, if not immediately. These are among the attributes and virtues of the average Western farmer, and these things explain why these days he is working overtime on the land with his seeding. Far from permitting himself to be consumed with worry over last year's setback, he is concerning himself with the present and the future and working with commendable and inspiring industry, hope and faith to turn them to account. The psychology of the prairie farmer is a standing rebuke to pessimism.—Regina Morning Leader-Post.

There are about 520 muscles that have to do with the moving of the human body.

Giant Rudder on Huge Truck

Sixty-seven tons of steel forged into a rudder to steer the 40,000-ton "Empress of Britain, Queen ship of the Canadian Pacific Atlantic fleet, was recently conveyed on the world's largest truck over a hundred miles of highway between Darlington, England, and Glasgow, Scotland, in seven days. The rudder which is 21 feet 9 inches by 20 feet 3 inches, could not be taken by railroad, and was transported on a 14-wheeled vehicle carrying a telephone at the rear from which directions were called to the driver. Heralded by Automobile Association scouts, and shepherded by police, long stretches of the road had to be closed to other traffic while it passed and in certain areas telegraph poles had to be shifted temporarily. In some villages on the route there was a clearance of only 1½ inches between the rudder and the walls of the houses. The rudder was delivered to the "Empress of Britain" ready to be placed in position.

NOT HAVING ANY

This is the time of year in which a flood of magazine solicitors is let loose on the West, from Eastern publishing houses. Their sales talk this year is a very high-powered affair, starting briskly with "Made in Canada" goods and working gradually up to reading matter. These agents seem to be quite nice boys, all struggling to get through some Eastern college and if perseverance helps, they'll make it. But our main quarrel with them is that in spite of the fact that their victim states that he has subscribed through a local agent and intends to renew through the local agent, they still persist in trying to make a sale. They don't grasp the small town viewpoint.

And there should be a small town loyalty in this little matter, quite as much as in larger ones. Every town has some Canadian magazine agent, who certainly is entitled to preference over strangers in the matter of magazine subscriptions.

The same holds true of itinerant peddlers of any other kinds of goods. If you buy from them, the money is spent elsewhere. Buy from the local merchant and the money is distributed for the good of the town.

All of which brings up the responsibility of mail order houses in supporting the thousand small town activities up and down the West—the activities that help in building up every town.

Did you notice any representative of the mail order houses at last Sunday's band concert, at the ball games, at the school concert, at any war memorial meetings, at any Ladies' Aid teas? They were not there, entering into things as they should have done. But in their place were all our own townspeople, who are expected to support churches, schools, all local development.

Who should get your business?
—Exchange.

PENDULUM MUST SWING BACK

A luncheon club speaker exhorts, "Now is the time to get ready for returning good times." Everybody at the table nods approval. Not one has a doubt that "good times" will come back. The attitude is that of the athlete poised on the trapeze ready to catch the returning bar and swings off for a swift flight.

That is psychologically inspired by the economists of recent years. The whole business world is obsessed by the idea that it has to be a sort of bob on the gigantic pendulum impelled by a force not well understood and alternating between fast swings and complete stand-stills. The hopeful phase of such a frame of mind lies in the fact that nobody really desponds when motion slows down. The thought always is, "Hold fast; get ready for the next swing!"

A still more hopeful sign is revealed in the tendency to revolt against the whole pendulum motion. Economists and other keen observers of business affairs are proclaiming that business itself, and not some blind force or economic principle, is responsible for the present erratic conditions.

Let this sensible teaching spread.

Here is a tremendous economic system built up by such genius as the world never before has known. It is backed by such an accumulation of available wealth as the world never before has had, and possesses resources in material and labor and craft wholly adequate to its needs for constant output. It is nonsense to say that such equipment should be controlled by unreasoning caprice or should run wholly uncontrolled till it breaks down periodically, wrecked by its own violence.—Sudbury Star.

Crossfield Win
By Narrow Margin.
Crossfield recieved a large scare Monday evening, when the Didsbury baseball nine were only one point behind at the end of a nine inning game.
Didsbury crossed the fourth base in the second inning for the first run of the game and were held there until the seventh inning. And the mean time Crossfield had crossed home plate six times. Didsbury started on a batting epree in the seventh and secured two more runs. Next frame every man had a turn at the bat and one man was at the bat twice. In this stanza the boys ran up a total of five runs, which put the locals two runs ahead the beginning of the eighth inning. Crossfield got the break in the latter part of the eighth inning running in four men on one hit and two errors. Didsbury at their last half recieved another run. Crossfield did not take their last bats.

Didsbury 6 Olds 3
Didsbury and Olds clashed at Olds for the first time this year on Friday evening last in a Rosebud League fixture, Didsbury coming out at the long end of the score, 6—3.
Didsbury started their scoring in the third innings when 3 runs were collected, all on errors made by the Olds team. Olds' weak spot was at short-stop. Didsbury again scored a run in the fourth stanza and the northerners also scored their first run in this canto, again in the sixth and also in the last. The locals secured their last run in the seventh innings.
Sutherland, on the mound for the northerners, struck out six men and only allowed five hits, but was given very poor support.
Devolin did a little better than his opponent pitcher, striking out eight batters and only allowed three single hits during the eight innings played and he was also given much better support.

Children's Day and Pentecost, the birth of the Christian Church, will be observed jointly in the Ev. Church next Sunday, June 8th. In the morning service the pastor will first give a ten minute Birth Day message suited to the understanding of the boys and girls. Then the sermon for the entire congregation will be based on the subject of Pentecost and World Conquest. In the evening a Children's Day program will be rendered. The children will, of course, have first place in this service, Children's Day being distinctively their day, and their happy faces and voices, the June flowers, birds and music will all harmonize to make this day a real festive day. All welcome.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued

"Well, I was bursting to tell you—seemed as if I couldn't get here quick enough. I knew Charmian was out, too, and thought maybe you'd like company. Besides, I wanted to borrow a lump o' butter for my dinner. I almost forgot it, same as I forgot to order when the boy come round. Don't you get up, Grandma, I know your ice box most as well as I know my own."

"And good reason, too!" murmured Grandma to herself as Miss Lizzie waddled off. "Seems as if in the last thirty years there's nothing Lizzie Baker hasn't borrowed of me—unless it's my tooth brush."

She turned to the window, stared for a moment, and then exclaimed: "Why, here comes Lawyer Garfield! What on earth does he want of me?"

CHAPTER XII.

Charmian was finding her old schoolmate a rather unsociable companion this morning. Once Grandma's cheery presence was left behind, he relapsed into silence, and was to all appearances giving his entire attention to the car. He didn't speak until they drew up before the Bascomb house with its expanse of glaring window glass.

"I'll run in," said Charmian. "I can get away from Emmy quicker than you can; and we mustn't loiter."

"I'm not liable to loiter with Emmy Bascomb," replied Jim, stepping out before Charmian could move. "Of all the bores . . ."

He left the sentence unfinished, and strode up the path, while Charmian, who agreed with him about Emmy, smiled to herself as she watched him enter the side door without waiting to knock. She was regarding the new windows disapprovingly when he came out, tossed Grandma's catalogue onto the back seat, and said, as he started the engine: "Quick work that—considering, Emmy's ordering a hat—by mail!"

The suspicion of a smile curved his lips, and Charmian laughed outright. "Did she ask your advice, Jim? I suppose she considered you an authority!"

He threw her a reproachful glance, but answered: "She showed me the picture, and asked whether to get blue, like her new waist, or black that'll go with everything. Ezra's in favor of the blue, Emmy thought it might be extravagant. I voted with Ezra, not because I cared a darn, which she got, but because I saw it was what she wanted."

"Tactful Jim! I didn't know you were a diplomat."

"There's a lot you don't know about me," he responded cryptically, and once more retired into silence.

Charmian, who feared to say the wrong thing, said nothing at all for a half mile; but as they climbed the hill that divided the two villages, she suggested: "Let's waste five minutes and stop under that oak tree. I love this view, Jim, and I haven't been here all summer. How small and peaceful the village looks from here. Somehow it always makes me think of 'O little town of Bethlehem.' Doesn't it ever make you feel that way, Jimmy, especially on a winter evening when the lights shine out from the houses?"

The young man, who had obeyed and stopped the car, was leaning forward on the steering wheel, his eyes searching the valley so far below.

"You're a queer kid, Charmian," he said quietly. "I guess you see things I don't see at all, and never will. It's mighty pretty up here, but I'd never think of comparing South Wickfield with Bethlehem. What put such an idea into your head?"

He was so genuinely puzzled that the girl laughed.

"Oh, you can laugh!" he burst out unexpectedly, "but it's no laughing matter to me. It makes me feel a thousand miles away from you. Grandma says you don't like the Bascombs' windows, or at least, she doesn't like 'em herself, which is the same thing."

"This is a lightning change of subject," commented Charmian.

"It's no change of subject at all," corrected Jim. "And if we're going to get back before dinner—"

He started the car so suddenly that the girl lost her balance, and for a moment her "woman's crowning glory" brushed his shoulder.

"Sorry," Jim apologized. "I didn't see that rock."

He released the arm which he had instinctively thrust out to help her, and Charmian said: "Didn't you? For a minute I thought it might be your manner of inviting me to a petting party."

"I don't pet that way," said Jim, and actually smiled.

"That's better," approved Charmian.

"What?"

"The smile. It makes you look more human. You've a terribly grim face, Jim, when you're upset mentally. Sometimes it scares me."

"Who said I was mentally upset?" he demanded, scowling.

"No one had to say it. It's been written all over you for the last hour. I suspect that I'm responsible for it in a measure, and that makes me sad. Won't you smile and be friends?" Jim smiled.

"You didn't quote correctly did you?" he inquired.

Charmian only laughed, and asked, as the car slowed down before a small, brown, shabby cottage: "Is this where you collect your interest? It doesn't look as if the interest would—well, come easy."

Jim nodded, and reached for a brief case containing papers.

"Oh, Jim!" Charmian spoke softly so as not to be overheard by any one within, "how can the poor soul meet things like interest? She has three children, hasn't she?"

"Five," he corrected, and stepped out onto the grass-grown sidewalk.

"But—where does she get the money to pay you? She can't possibly—"

"You don't have to worry about that," broke in Jim lightly, and turned away.

A queer, sick feeling crept slowly into the girl's heart. This didn't seem like the Jimmy Bennett she had always known. Did all men change when it came to business matters? she asked herself. Did none of them feel compassion for a woman who had to struggle as this poor woman must be struggling to keep the wolf from that shabby, sagging door? Was it just part of the day's work to them—collecting what must be the pitiful savings of weeks and months? And was Jim, who seemed so kind, like all the rest? Didn't he care . . .

Charmian pulled herself together suddenly, realizing that Jim had been gone some time, and that unless he hurried Doctor Carter would undoubtedly dine on the contents of a cold bean pot. Then the door opened, and though the woman smiled and shook hands with Jim, Charmian saw the unmistakable traces of recent tears in her red-rimmed eyes, and the girl's heart hardened a bit toward her old playmate and the hard, harsh world of business that was a part of him.

"Did she pay it?"

The question came almost against her will as they started back.

"She did," said Jim. "That's why I went there, wasn't it?"

"And you don't feel like—like Shylock?" burst from Charmian in sudden, overwhelming indignation.

Jim looked at her in amazement. "Why in thunder should I feel like Shylock?"

His voice was cheerful, more cheerful than it had been since they started out.

"If you don't know," Charmian replied coldly, "it would be useless for me to try to tell you." And it was she who was silent on the ride home.

CHAPTER XIII.

Sorry the ride wasn't more of a success," said Jim, as he left Charmian at the side door.

He smiled rather wistfully; but it was the words, not the smile that lingered with her as she turned on the stove drafts. Something in Jim's voice had brought back the uncomfortable feeling she had experienced earlier that day, when she thought she had hurt him. And he was right. The ride hadn't been much of a success. Charmian was, she told herself, ridiculously disturbed about it. Only the persistent pounding of Great-grandfather Davis's gold-headed cane, roused her to the fact that she hadn't run in to speak to Grandma, as was her almost invariable habit on reaching home.

"Well," exclaimed the old lady, as her granddaughter appeared in the doorway, "so its you! I didn't know but what it was a tramp, so I made all the noise I could. Where's Jimmy? Gone? Dear me, I had something to tell him. You needn't rush round so, childy, because the doctor won't be here to dinner. They're taking some one to the hospital at East-boro. He telephoned an hour ago. Sit down, Charmian, and let the dinner wait. There's news a-plenty."

"News? Who brought it?"

"Lizzie Baker; and like to die of apoplexy she was, from running. And after she'd gone home (by the back door after borrowing some butter), Gam Garfield brought the rest of it. He wanted to know the value of those beads we sold the deacon!"

Base Ball

Baseball players use Minard's for stiffness, strained ligaments and bruises. They also recommend it as a rubdown.

When Food Sours

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been overstimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a tasteless dose in water. It is pleasant, efficient, and harmless. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Charmian sank limply into a chair. "Don't tell me we've got a law suit on our hands!"

"And no sooner was Lizzie gone than I looked out and saw Gam Garfield crossing the street. It gave me a start! He walked in kind of solemn, too. He likes to look that way when he has a case—sort of important. But I wasn't going to have little Gam Garfield put on airs with me; so I said, 'Morning, Gam. I was just thinking of the time I caught you hanging by the seat of your trousers from our Porter apple tree. You were seven years old, and you'd eaten yourself sick, so I didn't have the heart to give you the spanking you deserved for stealing fruit.' That sort of—well, took the wind out of his sails, as you might say."

Little Helps For This Week

"Whosoever will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me."—Mark viii. 34.

The cross is not so hard to bear Since I have learned to say, O Lord, I walk not anywhere Unless Thou lead'st the way. —S. R. Leroy.

Both above and below, which way soever thou dost turn thee, everywhere thou shalt find the cross; and everywhere of necessity thou must have patience if thou wilt have inward peace, and enjoy an everlasting crown.—Thomas A. Kempis.

To repel one's cross is to make it heavier.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

Daughter Is Stronger Now

"My daughter Catherine is fifteen years old. She was very irregular, often sick at her stomach and had to stay in bed two or three days at a time. One of your booklets was sent to us by mail so I got her a bottle of Vegetable Compound. Catherine has been taking it regularly and she is gaining in weight and every way. I told the neighbors and four other girls are taking it with good results."—Mrs. Clarence Jenkinson, Box 14, Thom-loe, Ontario.
